WELCOME

Skiers, coaches and families,

Welcome to the 2024 Wisconsin Nordic Ski League State Championship. The league is excited to be able to host a competition showcasing the greatest middle and high school skiers from around the state as well as providing opportunities for those developing athletes to experience the support and camaraderie of the skiing community. Due to the low snow conditions and the need to move the State Meet to the first weekend in March, the competition has been combined with both the final Great Lakes JNQ event and Youth Cup Championships that were originally scheduled to be in Rhinelander and Minocqua

Good luck as you test yourself this weekend and strive to reach your goals after a season of hard work.

Best of Luck,
Ben Popp

2024 WNSL State Distance Championship Prediction

Ken Schoville

OK, I'm going to admit that my attempt at predicting the Sprint Championship at Arians Nordic Center, first weekend of February, was a little light on facts. I got the hot part right; klister, excitement, some drama, and sun scorched noses. In review, the right names were dropped, of teams, strengths, and gaps. Now to the final chapter of the bizarre and inspiring 2024 ski season.

The distance championships were originally planned for that second weekend of February, directly following the sprints. Didn't happen. As to be expected, the folks over at the Birkie Start had a 50th planned and wanted to save every scrap of snow crystals they had, and more. Can't blame them as they produced a modern miracle.

Now, after fulfilling that mirage of happenings, the happily ever after victories of Diggins and Schumacher, time to squeeze in a mish mash of a season finale. Yes, there will be a Distance Championship, just not in the same format as usual.

Due to cancellations in Rhinelander and Minocqua Winter Park the final Great Lakes JNQ and CXC Youth Festival got moved over and layered in with the Wisconsin High School Nordic Championship at the Birkie Start, Cable. To accommodate the various needs of all, concessions were made. A 3.3k loop x 2 will be the battleground for the JNQ/HS group while one lap will suffice for the Youth Cup/MS. Another change to keep things less complicated will be individual starts. For the high school and middle championship the two day's results will be accumulated to name a pursuit champion.

Of course the absolute final placing should blend, once more, results from the two weekends, both individuals and teams. JNQ and Youth standings will be pulled from the high school/middle school results to produce the various teams being named.

Mother Nature continues to raise her fickle hand this year and the upcoming weekend will be no different. Current predictions are calling for a high of 55 on Saturday for the Classic and 60 on Sunday for freestyle. It is early March, so whatever...

We'll start with the boys, as that's how the schedule flows. Two guys are in the running for the top spot; Jack Dahlby, Chippewa Valley Nordic and Owen Wick, Ashwaubenon Nordic Ski Team.

Also in the hunt; Kristian Hudacek, CVN, Cole Anderson and brother Ian, Iola Winter Sports Club, Dietrich Mattison, Blackhawk, as well as Charlie Vater, Iola.

We have the “time trial” aspect of the weekend to factor in. Some skiers, and coaches, are better equipped for the ride, flying through the woods ASAP, with sometimes skiers around, but many times not. With 30 second intervals there is a fair gap to consider. With only so many coaches on course, giving only so many splits, there’s pacing to consider, and sometimes a “drifty” mindset, unlike a mass or pursuit where multiple bodies give the ski struggles another vibe. With a lack of head to head data/results, you can see some gray areas in the prediction game.

Klister for the classic should not be a problem. With plenty of opportunities to gain klister knowledge, every team should be equipped and knowledgeable. Skiers should have had skis dialed in for their various flex zones and had some experience kicking klister. However, some adapt better than others, athletes and coaches.

So for the boys I’m giving Owen Wick, ANST, the nod. He’s gone back and forth with Ian Anderson, Iola, and Kristian Hudacek, CVN, all winter. He comes from a team strong in the classic, can do well in freestyle, and is a senior, my pick for #1. Behind him, a roll of the dice. The aforementioned characters all feature big lungs, savvy coaches, good programs, and guts galore. May the best man win, place, and draw.

Team wise, Iola seems ready to take the top spot with depth and ability. They lead from the sprint weekend and seem healthy. Having said that, ANST is five points back, and a slip here and there could upset the apple cart. Adding to the pressure is CVN with a group of strong motivated boys, only eight points out of first, close enough to smell the sweet spot of the top podium.

The individual girls have battled back and forth all season; JNQ’s, Iola, and the State Sprints. While some trends emerge, I think these results will go down to the wire. Josephine Kwasny and Greta Dickman, both IWSC, have to be in the mix. As teammates they swap back and forth on the high end of the results board and show no signs of stopping. Sure, one may sprint faster, one has a preferred technique, but when push comes to shove they are close competitors.

Throw Lauren Carlton, ANST, into the mix and she may split or top the two from Iola. Peak always has good girls, just a part of the team history and makeup. They led all teams at the Iola Meet in January, both free and classic. Granted there were some key players missing, but it was home turf for the Iola girls, usually an advantage. Not so on those two days. So now we can throw Anne Straka, Riley Grossklaus, Krin Blegen, and Sophia Jedlewska into the mix, and three out of four ain’t bad for scoring. When Someone’s down, the others pickup.

So, after the dust settles on Sunday, I see Greta Dickman, Iola, atop the podium. Good skiing friend Josephine Kwasny on one side, and Lauren Carlton on the other.

Which side? Stay tuned as there will be a heated debate over the weekend ski trails.

The girl's team seems less dramatic after the sprint weekend. IWSC leads with 148 points, PEAK 123, and ANST with 115. As frequently happens, a lot depends on number 3; and perhaps four and five as they act as displacers for scoring purposes.

I know there's going to be some head shaking on this one, but I see Peak at the top of the Podium. Sure, there's a fair number of points to make up to Iola, but I've seen motivated skiers before, and there are a lot of Peak skiers to motivate. Oftentimes numbers count, larger teams have a deeper bench and that translates to more scoring potential. IOLA number two spot, ANST third.

What a year. From the lows of endless snowless practices, also called extensive dryland, all the coaches of the state should get an extra bonus check added to their huge salaries. From the worst of times to the best, we're riding the emotional Tsunami of the Wirth World Cup, to the Impossible Birkie 50th, to the 2024 Wisconsin High School Nordic Championship/GLJNQ/CXC YouthCup Festival. Let's go out with a BANG!

2024 WNSL State Sprint Championship Prediction

Ken Schoville

What a weird, wild, wacky winter. If it wasn't for good news from Europe we'd all be crying in our rapidly melting snowpack as we watched white turn to gray and ugh! Brown! God bless snowmaking and with my good business sense I'm going to be investing all my petty cash where it should have gone before. Of course the northern tier of Wisconsin got used to good winters; bountiful, beautiful, winter wonderland stuff; record setting in many departments, including using up grooming equipment with accumulating hours that now sits idle. Enough whining, on to the good stuff.

Several years ago the Wisconsin Nordic Ski League decided that it would be a good thing to make sprinting on par with the distance championship. If you were a high school skier who had aspirations of being a state champ, or in the hunt competitively speaking, you needed to do well at both events on two weekends.

Of course Nordic race types are blessed with both fast twitch and slow twitch muscle fibers to varying degrees all linked to a cardiovascular system that is trained to a multitude of finite levels and then harnessed to a spirit that has a personality able to withstand pain, suffering, possible humiliation and angst for the joys of competition.

If it was track we'd have a duathlon combining 800m speed and 7,000m endurance; the physiological ying and yang of high school skiing in Wisconsin producing an "Skimeister". Works for me. They do it on the World Cup in a different fashion over a season with the same outcomes, with elite profiles that is.

Over the past dozen or so years sprinting has resided in Madison; first around the Square as part of a surreal trucked in Winter Festival, later to a west side park, Elver, and finally to the CXC Outdoor Center in Middleton, all run under the good graces of CXC and one of the local ski clubs; MadNorSki. Through mutual agreement, WNSL assumed control of the event and the fantabulous new Ariens Nordic Center in Brillion became the venue de jour and Wow! What a shining new, vast array of snowmaking equipment you have there folks! A great place to be this year.

Saturday is Team Sprints day and with around 350 skiers entered it should be nonstop action; high school in the morning and middle school afternoon of the freestyle variety. Two person teams, everybody plays the game, some longer than others, and by late afternoon we will see who's done their homework.

Sunday is an individual classic day with many waxologists pouring over the klister tubes as temps are predicted to swing from sub 32 qualifying to 40+ degrees for the rounds. Klister blister will be a real deal for some, along with a fair amount of sweat and sunscreen for all. This is the last year of a SWIX/WNSL deal limiting selection for glide, but with a full range of non flouro kickers to choose from.

In "the old days" the northern teams might have had a psychological/physiological edge based on snow time and length of season. This, of course, is a long standing myth exposed countless times by well coached southern teams with smug attitudes, chips on the shoulder, "we've got something to prove" enthusiasm, and long bouts of roller skiing, along with judicious road trips. Unfortunately almost everyone has the same problem this year, so we'll see which cream rises to the top.

This year's predictions are fundamentally flawed, lacking in hard data, and limited to a couple of JNQ sprint results, marred by Usomethings age groups muddying the waters and fogging up my crystal ball. Sure, we can look at last year's sprint results, wade through the select kids doing the GL JNQ circuit, but to get head to head, all together results? Pure ethereal, will o' the wisp, phantom musings. Not much to go on here, but drawing on outside/insider resources, a few key trends are observable.

Iola Winter Sports Club stepped in for the Rhinelander Hodag Challenge this year as the biggest ski event prior to the two championship weekends. Two days of mass starts, freestyle and then classic brought out some tight racing and meaty results.

In the boy's team scoring Iola stands out for both depth and quality. The Iola ski coaches have made some sort of devil's pact with the Stevens Point high school cross country running coaches, a perennial state powerhouse, effectively handing over enviable Vo2 Max capacity. Throw in a bunch of technique training, depth, chemistry, and you have my #1 pick.

However, Chippewa Valley Nordic, is also riding high in the boys department and had a key player missing at the big lola meet. If healthy and all present, they'll be locked and loaded, ready to rumble on the corn snow.

The number three spot will be contested between ANST and Peak, tough to call at this point and it may depend on the klister kids hitting the sweet spot of grip and glide as temperatures and sun exposure play havoc at the wax table. Fun times ahead.

The girls' team predictions also hinge on the wax table, obviously, but also who's recovered from the latest corona/nano/rhino crap that's been making the rounds this winter and shows up present in more than body only. It's just my personal conspiracy theory, but it seemed that we had a lot fewer colds and flu with a good dose of sub zero temperatures, hard to find this winter. I'm checking my sources, but I believe Aaron Rodgers agrees with me.

Peak and lola were a point apart at the big meet and ANST was missing their #1 girl. As you recall, numbers don't lie and Peak has the numbers. It's not just the top three per team that matter, but all the little pushes from below as team members train and travel that add up. But, with a full ANST squad, healthy, on a close to home turf, properly motivated, and and with a screaming crowd in the spectators mosh pit....definitely a run for the number one spot. That's not to say that Bay Nordic and Chippewa Valley Nordic are left out. They're both going to have some top ten spots and that third place podium block has a big question mark on it at this time.

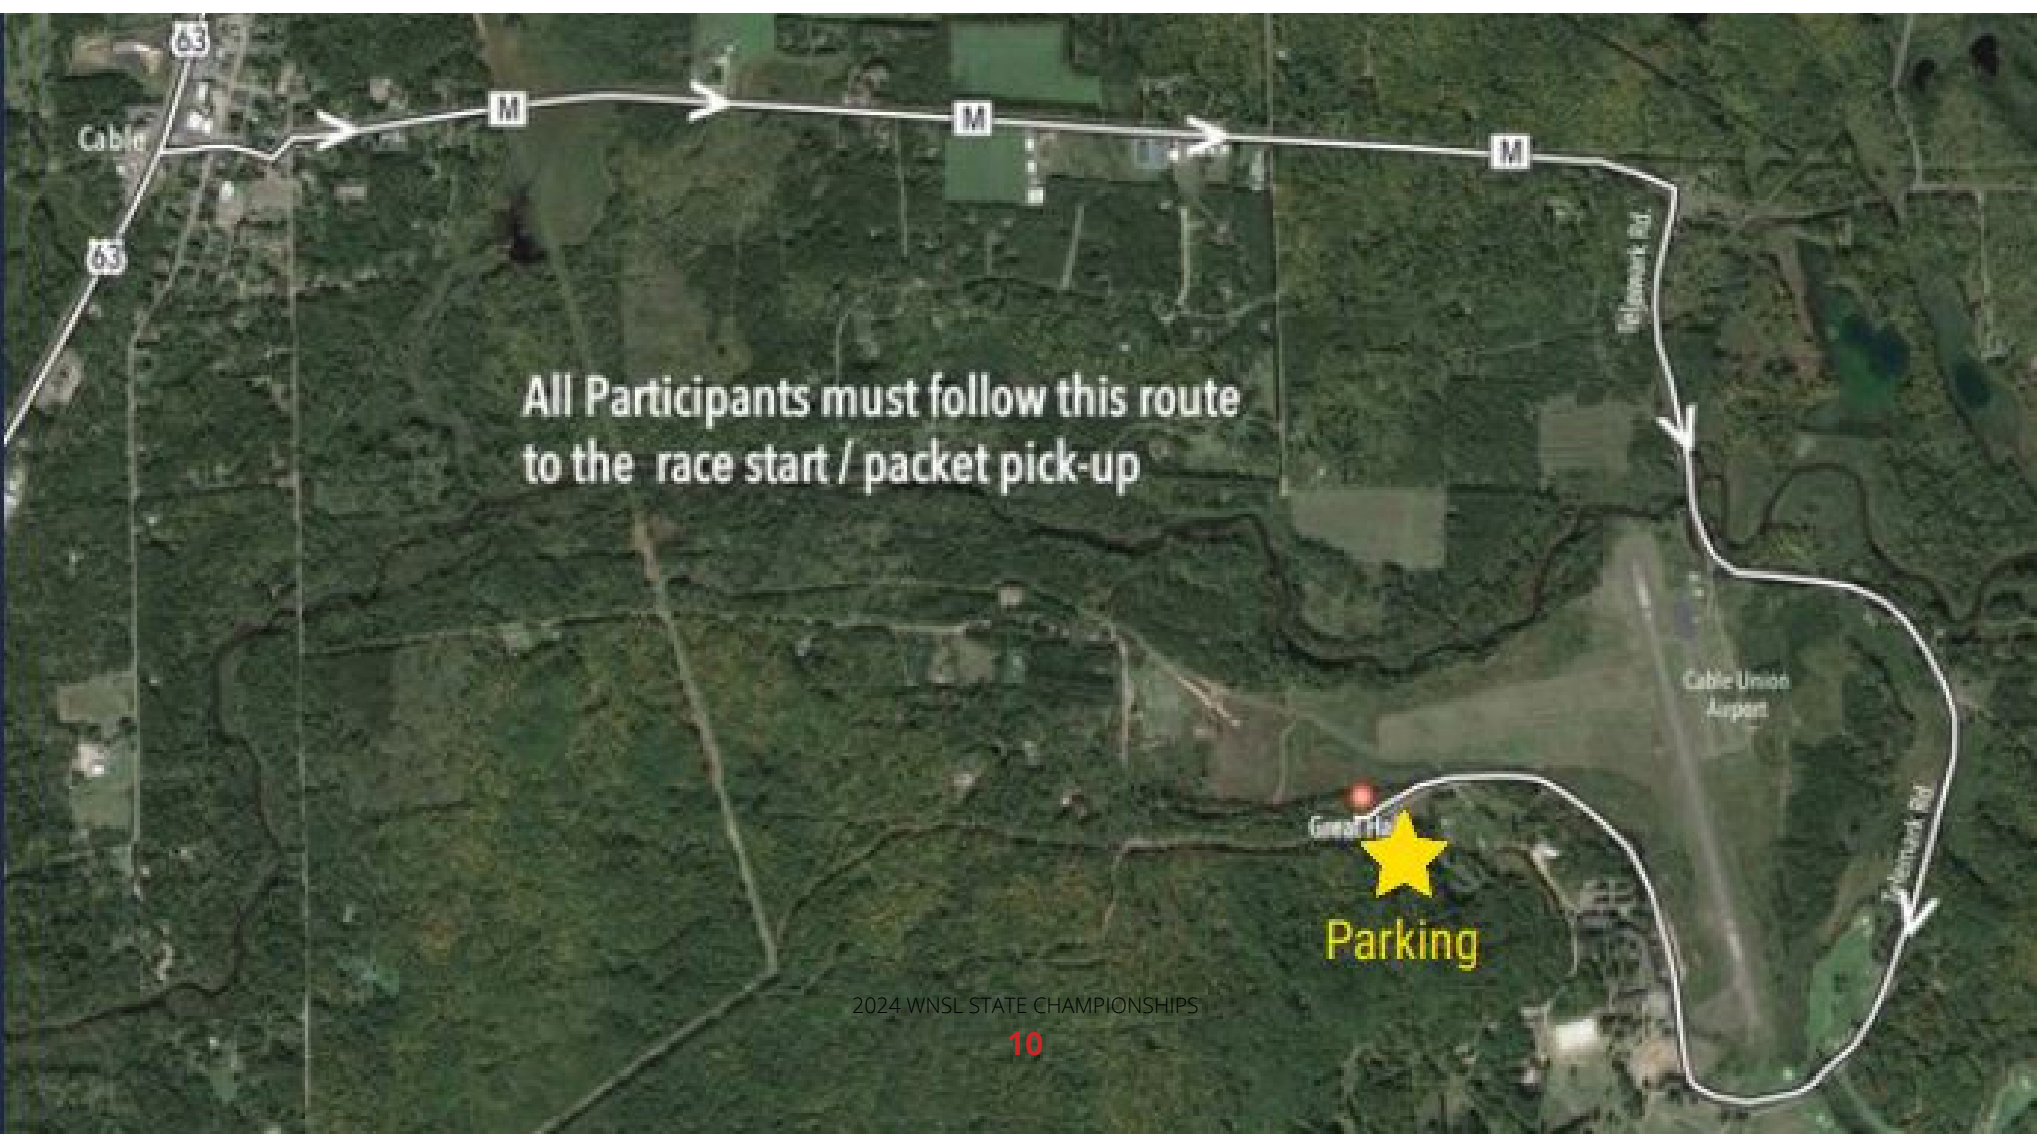

After an El Niño for the record books we're finally to the start of the championship weekends; the clan is coming together. The bags are packed, the skis waxed, coaches and team managers primed to kick in the necessary ingredients to the traveling teams road show. The silvery crystals of Arians awaits. It's gonna be a hot one!
